THE HEROIC AGE OF ANTARCTIC EXPLORATION

SPECIAL
EDITION

Antarctica was (and still is) a distant place visited by few, largely unknown and only in recent times brought to public awareness. Photographs were rare, moving pictures even more so and radio was in its infancy. Exploration of this "Terra Incognita" was at the limit of possibilities, at the limits of logistical support, of physical endurance and technological capability. Unlike space exploration however, determined individuals with relevant experience and the ability to generate and draw on support, particularly sponsorship, could mount an expedition.

Adventurous men were drawn to this arena like a magnet and over the period of just a few short years Antarctica was where some of the bravest and most worthy of explorers ever to have lived, met some of the harshest conditions ever endured.

Uniquely in any field of exploration there was a coming together in a short period of a concentration of character, bravery and literary ability. This is one of the reasons that the history of Antarctic exploration remains so popular and well known.

Photography too is well represented in the early expeditions by Herbert Ponting with Scott's 1910-1913 Terra Nova expedition and Frank Hurley with Shackleton's 1914-1917 Trans-Antarctic expedition aboard the Endurance. Their photographs not only provide us with an excellent and comprehensive historical record, but are superb examples of the photographers art, particularly when it is considered that they were accomplished with relatively primitive equipment.

A final tragic chapter to many of these stories of the "Heroic Age" was that they took place in the years just before the First World War. Many of the adventurers and members of the exploratory parties joined their countrymen on the battlefields of Europe on their return from Antarctica. The Great War then took a terrible toll on their numbers. Despite their heroism and fortitude in the frozen south, many were due to die in the appalling industrialized waste of life that characterized this war.

The Heroic Age of Antarctic exploration, though it happened a century ago now is still very real and very accessible thanks to the efforts and talents of the men who chronicled and photographed the events as they happened. Join the emotion and feeling of the era, come with us on our Anniversary voyage in January 2011. Gather together a group of friends and make it an adventure that you'll remember always.

The close of the Heroic age was upon the death of Ernest Shackleton in 1922 while aboard the ship Quest at anchor at South Georgia. After this time Antarctic expeditions were fundamentally different.

With excitement mounting among Antarctic operators and shipping companies leading up to the 2011-2012 season, we've moved mountains to bring you our early-release Antarctic brochure for this Centennial season, and your personal copy is enclosed.

You will see, we have assembled a large number of vessels and voyages among them, two specific 'end of an era voyages' with the mighty icebreaker Kapitan Khlebnikov.

The season marks the Centennial of Mawson, Amundsen and Scott's expeditions to Antarctica and has created great demand among travellers the world over, now booking to visit the region during this period.

This is also your last opportunity to join the Adventure Associates' 38th year Anniversary Voyage to Antarctica departing 18 January 2011 aboard the vessel Ushuaia.

And, as a gift to you we are offering the first 20 people to book and deposit for this Anniversary cruise, after receiving this publication a significant reduction of US$500 per person. Bearing in mind that the cruise costs are already reduced by 5%. This offer is not combinable with any other offer relating to this voyage and is available up to 31 October 2010, unless sold out prior to this date.
